Invest in a Future of Healthy Aging

Your Gift. Our Research. A Healthier Future for All.

Over the past several issues, we've highlighted the many facets of the Stein Institute's Invest in a Future of Healthy Aging campaign — from breakthrough research and training the next generation of aging scientists to community engagement, transformational giving, and honoring more than 40 years of progress. This issue brings those priorities together.

At its core, the campaign reflects a single vision: advancing the science of healthy aging in ways that are innovative, inclusive, and impactful.

Through continued investment in cutting-edge research, the Stein Institute is expanding knowledge of how people can live longer, healthier lives. By training future leaders in aging science, we're ensuring that today's discoveries become tomorrow's solutions. And by bridging science and community, we're translating research into real-world impact that benefits older adults and families.

As we reflect on four decades of leadership in aging research, we also look ahead — strengthening programs, supporting bold ideas, and building a foundation for the future.

Transformational giving plays a critical role in making this work possible, providing the flexibility and support needed to advance discovery and opportunity.

Thank you for being part of the Invest in a Future of Healthy Aging campaign.

Your partnership helps ensure a healthier future for generations to come.
